

РЕПРОДУКТИВНЫЕ НАМЕРЕНИЯ И ИХ РЕАЛИЗАЦИЯ В 2004-2011 ГГ.: ЧТО ПОКАЗЫВАЮТ ДАННЫЕ РИДМИЖ?

Changes in fertility intentions and their realization in 2004-2011: what we can learn from GGS data?

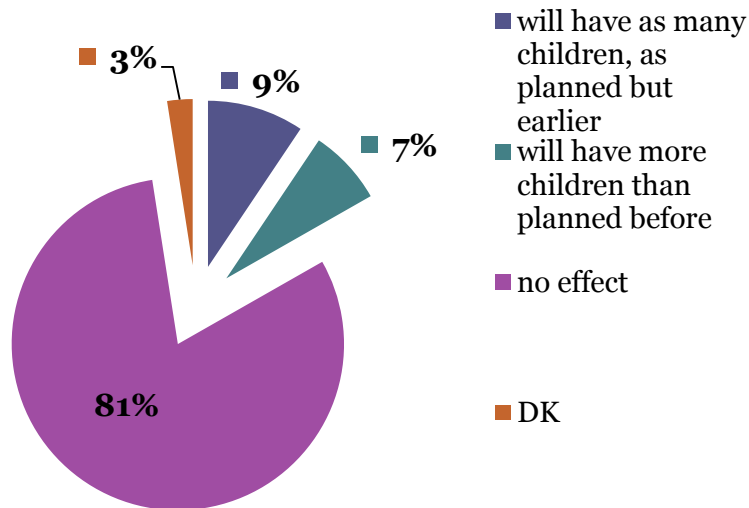

Оксана Синявская, НИУ ВШЭ –
НИСП

Oxana Sinyavskaya, HSE & IISF
osinyavskaya@hse.ru

IDEM conference,
31.10.2013

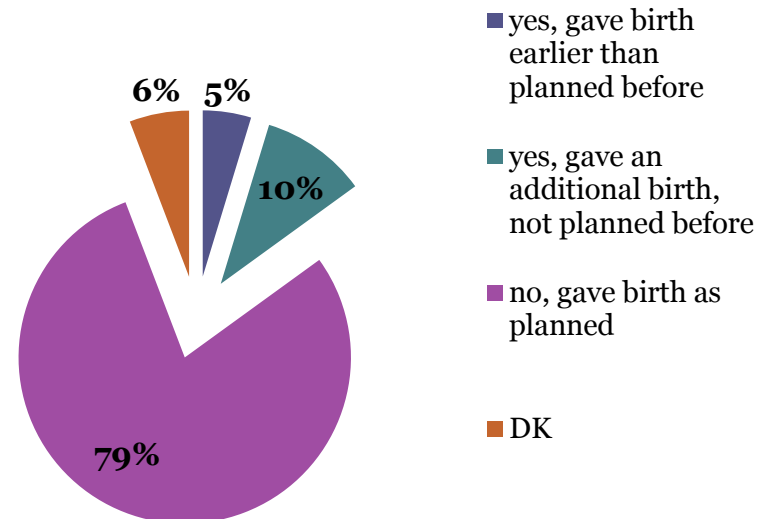

What do people think on the policy impact on their reproductive behavior?

Estimated impact of the policy on future births

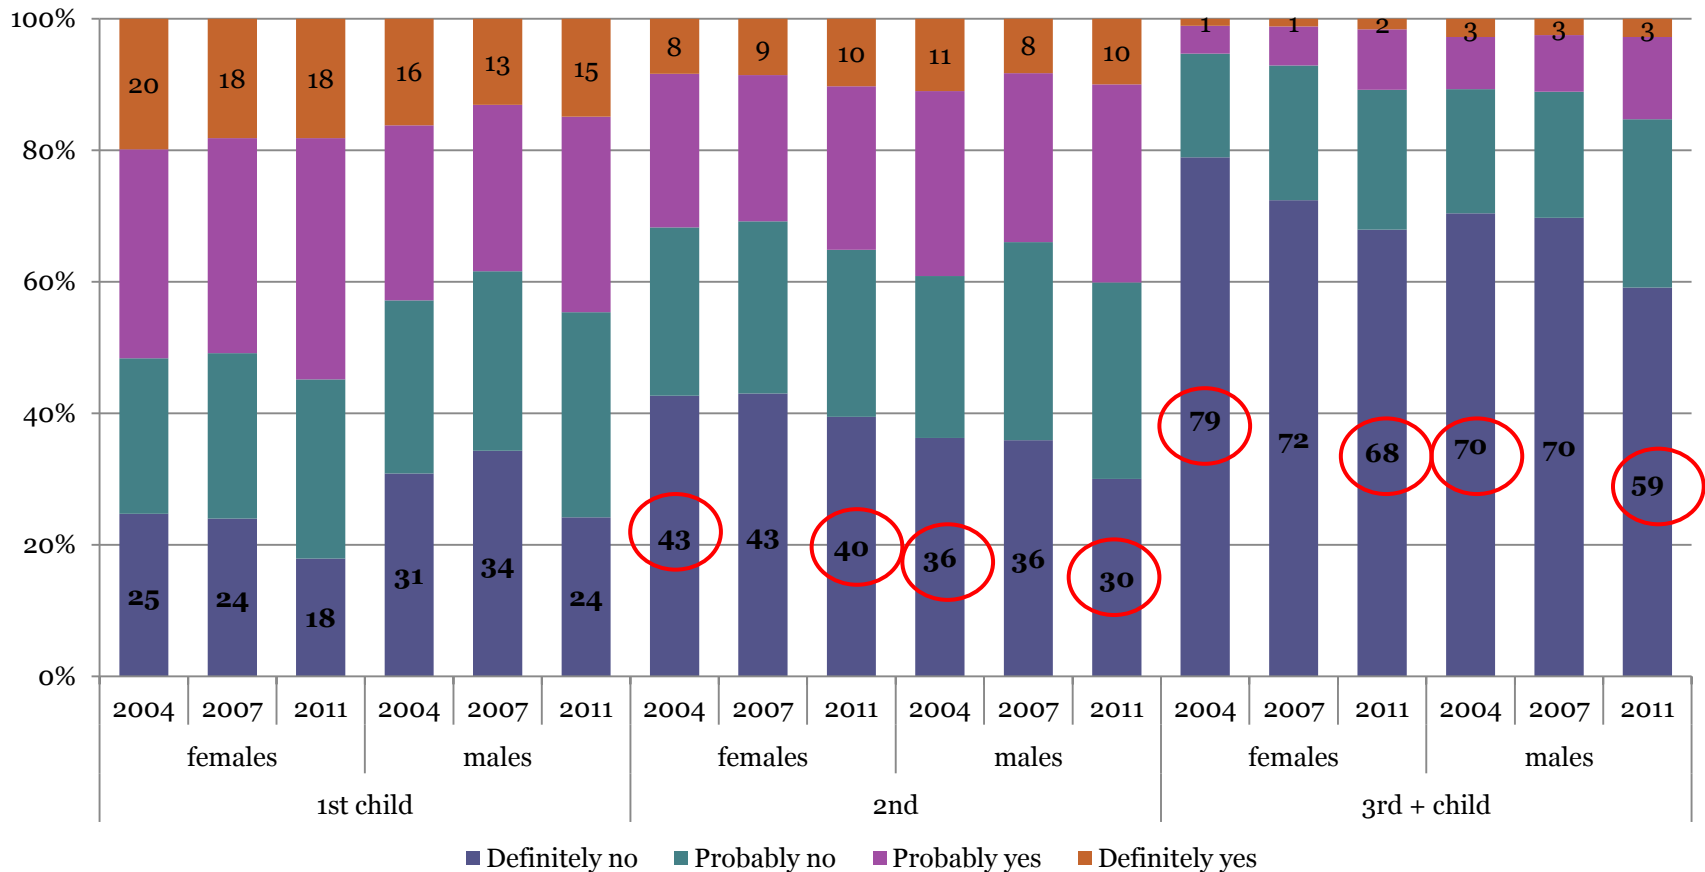

2007

Estimated impact of the policy on births from 2007

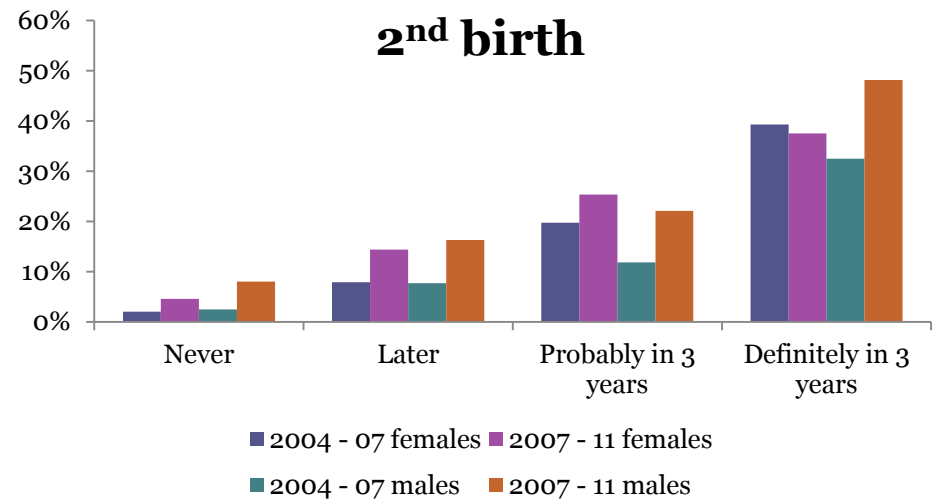

2011

Dynamics of intentions to have a child in 3 years, 2004 - 2011

Cross-sectional data, respondents below 45 years old

Births between waves by intentions

Panels:
w1 – w2, respondents born
in 1960 or later
w2 – w3, respondents born
in 1963 or later

Positive intentions to have a child in 3 years and births between waves by birth cohort

■ definitely' + 'probably yes' 2004-07 ■ definitely' + 'probably yes' 2007-11
— births 2004-07 — births 2007-11

■ definitely' + 'probably yes' 2004-07 ■ definitely' + 'probably yes' 2007-11
— births 2004-07 — births 2007-11

↑
1st birth

↑
2nd birth

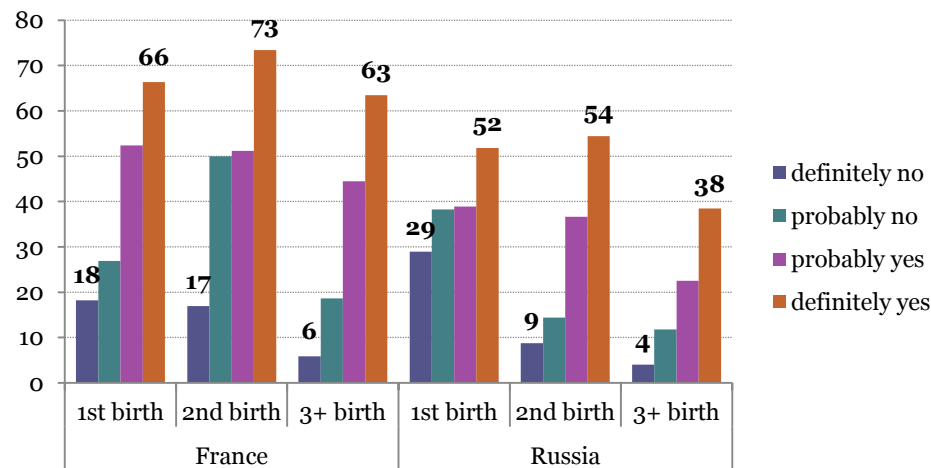

■ definitely' + 'probably yes' 2004-07
■ definitely' + 'probably yes' 2007-11
— births 2004-07
— births 2007-11

← 3rd + birth

Intentions to give a 2nd birth in 3 years among those who planned to have it 3 years before but didn't have it

Intentions to have a child in 3 years and its realization in w1 - w3 in Russia and France

Conclusions

- Little changes in intentions and realizations, greater changes for 3rd+ births
- Calendar shift? (but cannot prove it yet)
- Short-term effect?
- Incompatibility – lower intentions among women
- Future steps: Factors of realization / not realization of intentions
- Should the government stop spending money on support fertility?
 - Expenditures on families with children to be increased
 - Aims to be changed - Family policy should not be considered as only aimed at fertility increase
 - Other instruments than ‘maternity capital’